In this tenth and final presentation for academic year 2018 of the InterAgency Brown-Bag Lecture Series, co-hosted by the U.S. Army Command and General Staff School and the Simons Center for Interagency Cooperation, Dr. Ted Thomas, the director of CGSC's Department of Command and Leadership, will discuss how leading in an interagency-dominated contemporary environment requires a more nuanced approach. In his presentation Dr. Thomas will explain how we might traverse various leadership obstacles by aligning our approach with the situation at hand (...head or heart).

Dr. Ted Thomas is the director of the Department of Command and Leadership in the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Dr. Thomas graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1978 and served 20 years in various command and staff positions before retiring as a lieutenant colonel with his last assignment as battalion commander of the 554th Engineer Battalion. He received a master's in Civil Engineering (1986) from the University of Illinois, and a doctorate in Engineering Management (1998) from Missouri University of Science and Technology. He joined the CGSC faculty in 2005 and has served as the director of the department since 2007.

All lectures in this series are free and open to the public.
Attendees are welcome to bring their own lunches
